

Plain-English Summary

TVR rental trailers include renter insurance coverage through our rental insurance program. You do not have to buy a separate daily insurance product during checkout. Coverage is subject to policy terms and may apply after any other collectible insurance, such as applicable tow-vehicle insurance.

Frequently Asked QuestionsDo I need to purchase insurance separately to rent a TVR trailer?

No. Renters do not pay a separate daily insurance rate and are not required to purchase coverage online during booking. The rental includes renter coverage through TVR's rental insurance program, subject to the policy terms.

What if my personal auto insurance does not cover a rented trailer?

That does not automatically prevent you from renting. You still must provide proof of valid insurance for the tow vehicle. TVR's renter coverage may apply according to the policy terms, but it is not a promise that every loss or cost will be paid by insurance.

What does "excess coverage" mean?

It means any other collectible insurance that applies may be used first. TVR's renter coverage may then apply after that, according to the insurance policy. In simple terms: if your tow-vehicle policy applies, it may be first in line; if it does not apply, TVR's rental coverage may still be available under the policy.

What insurance information do I need to provide?

You must provide a valid driver's license, tow vehicle details, and proof of valid insurance for the tow vehicle. This information is required for our rental file and may be needed if a claim has to be filed.

Coverage Terms Explained

Type	What it generally means
Liability coverage	Tennessee statutory limits: bodily injury $25,000 per person / $50,000 per accident, and property damage $25,000 per accident.
Collision	Coverage for collision with another vehicle or object, whether stationary or moving.
Comprehensive	Coverage for non-collision events such as fire, hail, vandalism, or theft by someone who is not the renter.
Conversion	Coverage for theft by a renter, such as taking the trailer and failing to return it.

What the renter is still responsible for

- Safe towing, proper loading, weight distribution, and legal operation of the tow vehicle and trailer.
- Damage, loss, theft, misuse, negligence, missing equipment, or charges not covered or paid by insurance.
- Following the rental agreement, returning the trailer on time, and reporting any accident, damage, theft, or loss right away.

Claims and Loss Process

If there is an accident, theft, damage, or other loss, contact TVR immediately. Claims must be submitted through the insurance customer service portal within 30 days after the end of the rental term in which the loss occurred.

Information needed for a claim
Signed rental agreement
Driver's license information
Tow vehicle insurance ID card
Police report if the trailer is stolen
Photos, written details, and any other information reasonably requested by TVR or the insurance company

Important Questions Before You Tow

- Is your tow vehicle insured, registered, and mechanically capable of towing the trailer and load?
- Do you have the correct hitch, ball size, wiring connection, safety chains, and trailer lights working?
- Is the load within the trailer and tow vehicle limits, properly balanced, and secured?
- Have you reviewed and signed the TVR Trailer Rental Agreement?

Bottom line: The rental includes insurance coverage, but the renter is still responsible for safe towing, proper use, and any loss, damage, or costs not covered by insurance or not paid by the insurance company.

Customer Acknowledgment Language

The following language may be used on the website or in the booking process:

I understand that TVR rental trailers include renter insurance coverage subject to the policy terms. I am not required to purchase separate insurance during booking. I understand this coverage may apply on an excess basis over any other collectible insurance. I agree to provide proof of valid tow-vehicle insurance and understand I remain responsible for safe towing, proper use, damage, loss, theft, missing equipment, and any amounts not covered or paid by insurance.
